

2.6.1 – Student Performance and Learning Outcomes

M.Ed Course: The program outcomes of the M.Ed course as follows: Students will acquire indepth knowledge of the foundations of education. Students will develop research skills. They will have an understanding of the various approaches to teaching in the 21st century, are able to explicate links between pedagogy, curriculum and learning, and are able to evaluate and critique teaching practice and curriculum implementation from relevant research validated perspectives

B.Ed Course: Program Outcomes: By the end of the course, student teachers: have an understanding of the various approaches to teaching in the 21st century, are able to explicate links between pedagogy, curriculum and learning, and are able to evaluate and critique teaching practice and curriculum implementation from relevant research validated perspectives.